Good day!

Were you able to receive all the emails and voice messages I left regarding the publication of your book?

I see only one logical step at this point: Get your book published!

Your work has great potential. There is no doubt about that. What you have right now is a raw material and your work could use a lot of help in transforming it into a professionally bound book. What we need to do at this point, is to make sure we present the book to the public in the most attractive way possible. We'll need to edit, design, and market the book. We'll help you with that. We've worked with thousands of authors and thousands of books, and we understand the psychology of the reading/buying public. The golden rule in publishing is, STRIKE WHILE THE IRON IS HOT. There's no better time to launch a new title than MAY all the way up to Summer because this is THE buying season—and timing IS everything.

Your book is done and ready. Now you must let people read it. And I'm not talking about people you know, or people WE know. I'm talking about the average reader, the reader who loves books, the reader who spends hours in a local bookstore just browsing through titles, the reader who logs on to barnesandnoble.com and writes reviews about the books she loved and the books she hated, the reader who has other reader friends.

This is more than just printing copies of your book. You, with our help, are setting a career path for you – as an author. Publishing and multimedia companies from all over the world look closely to this book frenzy in order to negotiate international publishing rights and licensing fees. This is a critical marketing event for the launching of books and visitors take the opportunity to obtain information about the publishing market, to network, and to do business.

Let's show them YOUR book!
